INDIVISIBLE. A moment face to face they stood, While soul met soul in honest eyes That trembling glowed through unshed Born of a love that pever dies.

They met to speak the saddest word That e'er on human hips can dwelt: But, O, the mockery to dream That such as these could take farewell.

For as two reseate clouds unite, In wake of the departed sun. Their kindred essence pure and sweet, These twain had softly merged in one.

Might live through all the years apart; What mattered time and space to them Whose home was in each other's heart?

They might have been severed pole from pole,

He craved a tress of that fine gold Whose wavy wreaths her forehead graced, Bending to grant the boon, he clasped A zone of pearl about her waist.

A moment more, and he was gone From sight, nought else. High heart Stronghold of tenderness and truth, Defied the hour and stayed behind!

The seasons rolled, and ne'er again Thus face to face 'twas theirs to stand Yet heart to heart they walked the world On to the goal, the silent land.

O gift of gifts! a noble soul That wraps our own in full embrace, Till all mean things in love's great sea

A Chat with the Ladies. About What to Wear and Bow to Wear

We find but little in the way of novelties to chronicle for this week. The present is really the dormant period of the year, and we congratulate our readers that it occurs at a time when one can be fully occupied in Latterly we have noticed some very pretty breton costumes for children. Blue is still the prevailing color for them, while Russian green has taken the place of blue for grown people Green percale or foulard is really very stylish and just the thing on excessive hot days for short journeys. Some one asks us if we recommend bunting of percale for a sea voyage or a mountain excursion. No; they are neither heavy nor warm enough. A good heavy serge will be found none too warm for these latitudes; and we cannot avoid smiling, when we occasionally visit an ocean steamer at its sading hour, to see unsophisticated women in not believe it. - Appleton City Pilot. dainty garbs hardly suited for home pienic, and think how much they will wish they had put on a short, real stout dress, before they have been out at sea forty-eight hours. The breton is a pretty style for almost all fabries. and a serge can be made in this form, with ivorywhite trimmings, which will be sutiable for all occasions. And what is best, the breton bitls fair to be the coming autumn costume; so no one need fear to follow this style, thinking it will soon

Black grenadines are being made in breton now, in preference to all other styles, and the lovely silk-embroidered grenadine galloons assist in making them lovely costumes

Black silks are also made in this way, and trimmed with heavy embroidery, either grave or gay. For a young lady, a black silk trimined with pink blue, or red pipings, and embroidery, the effect is charming, and transfers a sombre dres into something gay and tasteful.

Fringed or raveled trimmings, when the goods will admit, are the most popular just new, and are used in a variety of ways. A pleated flounce can be raveled both top and bottom, before pleating, and after being placed upon the skirt, a narrow band of the goods, or of titan braid, or galloon, should be placed some three inches from the top. Or the flounces can be hemmed on the lower edge, and gathered in five or seven rows, at intervals, leaving a space between the ganging. After this is set upon the skirt, a broad piece is raveied at aech edged and gauged to form two pufls-this to be al scheme. - Tribune. used as a heading for the flounce. The basque and sleeves can be trimmed with raveled pleating with good effect.

We saw a pretty and expensive suit for a little girl the other day. It was of blue bunting. The all trouble and vexation of spirit, waist was cut exactly like a gabrielle, reaching be low the hips, then a skirt added, which was laid in box pleats, about one and one-half inches wide all around. The seam, when joined to the skirt, -not even an apology for one. was covered with a narrow pleating raveled at both edges. A round-crown straw hat, with drooping brim, and trimmed with blue ribbon band; dark blue hose, and high boots, with sandal tops, ornamented with bows of ribbon; a crochet sailor collar, and white lisle gloves, completed this

Among the late style of hats, and probably hints of coming styles, we notice the crowns are excessively high, and brims inclined to the narrow. These are pretty for petite women.

We made a hurried allusion, some little tim since, to "The Multiform," a new style of hair; and "The Multiforme," an instrument for arrang-

We have since adopted the style for ourselves, and pronounced it perfect.

The hair, instead of being a long, cumbersome heating switch, is short, and woven lengthwise on a stem. This is inserted in a cylinder tube, and brushed over it to form a perfect roll. The price of hair and instrument ranges from $10 to $15; the color of hair making the difference in price. White linen lawn handkerthiefs, trummed with colored lace, are among the latest novelties. Mother-of-pearl segums are still a favorite trimming, and will probably be used the coming fall if the breton remains in force. Little girls and misses wear very long colored stockings, to match the costumes, if in color; if white, the sash and stockings. So we often see little girls witq pale pink, blue or buff hose, All hose are now fastened above the knee, and

Yourself. You cannot find a more companionable person than yourself, if proper attention be paid to the individual. Yourself will go with you wherever you like, and come away when you piease-approve your jokes, assent to your propositions and in short be in every way agreeable, if you only learn and practice the true art of being on good terms with yourself. This, however, is not easy as some imagine, who do not often try the experiment. Yourself, when it catches you in company with no other person, is apt to be a se-vere critic on your faults and foil-les, and when you are consured by yourself, it is generally the severest and most intolerable species of reproof It is on this account that you are afraid of yourself, and seek any associates, no matter how inferior, whose bold chat may keep yourself from playing the censor. Yourself is likewise a jeasous bore, and to be left, even a short time "by yourself," is then regarded as actually a cruel penance, after they have been committed. Our nature is two-fold, and its noblest part is the self to which we refer. It stands on the alert to check the excess of the animal impulses, and though it beomes weaker in the fulfilment of its task by repeated disappointments, it is rarely so enfeebled as to be unable to rise up occasionly, sheeted and pale, like Richard's victims, to overwhelm the offender with better reproaches. Study, therefor, to be on good terms with yourself; it is happiness to be truly pleased with yourself.
